Feel Like

If you feel like doing something, you want to do it. Use a verb + ing after feel like.

Example:

It’s really hot outside. What do you feel like doing?
I feel like going to the beach.

A. Answer the questions. Write your answers on the lines.

1. The weather is beautiful. What do you feel like doing?

___________________________________________________________________________

2. It’s raining. What do you feel like doing?

___________________________________________________________________________

3. We need to get some exercise. What do you feel like doing?

___________________________________________________________________________

4. It’s lunchtime. What do you feel like eating?¹

___________________________________________________________________________

5. What is something you always feel like doing?

___________________________________________________________________________

6. What is something you never feel like doing?

___________________________________________________________________________

B. Read the questions and answers aloud with a partner.

¹ After feel like, you can use a verb + ing, or you can use a noun. For example, you can say, “I feel like eating pizza,” or “I feel like pizza.”